NEA podcast series: “Dual Lives”

Most artists in America have to work a day job to meet ends meet. We tell their stories in the podcast series, “Dual Lives.” Meet singer/songwriter Deborah Bond – she sings like a dream, has three CDs and tours internationally. So, why isn’t singing her full-time gig? Listen to the podcast at arts.gov/audio/singer-deborah-bond.

- And while you’re there:
- Conductor Michael Tilson Thomas discusses his dual career as conductor and educator.
 - Na’alehu Anthony discusses his documentary about traditional Polynesian open-sea canoeing and its significance to the revitalization of Hawaiian culture.
 - Aditi Brennan Kapil discusses the ways her mixed cultural background informed her play, “Agnes Under the Big Top: A Tall Story.”
 - Bert Crenca talks about founding the community arts center AS220, its interaction with the city Providence, RI, and its arts education offshoot AS220 Youth.
